My approach is to run you through a variety of drills and vocal techniques. I do that because I want to find out how you use your voice, breath and everything else needed for singing and voice tone. But don't worry because I guide you along.

All you need to do is be open and go with the flow. It is fun and eye-opening on many levels. This lets us both understand how you are using your voice right now to find out what is working for you what is not. That gives you your set-point.

Once we know where you are starting from, your set-point, we get started on bringing out your full voice in a way that is natural and authentic to you.

You will experience your voice in a whole new way and make progress based on YOU being YOU!
